Information for the poem:

Agatha Mary Clarissa Miller, better known as Agatha Christie, was a British writer and playwright specializing in the police genre, for whose work she was recognized internationally.

Throughout her career, she published 66 crime novels, 6 romance novels, and 14 short stories

In 1926, affected by a supposed depression, she mysteriously disappeared after her car was found abandoned on the side of the road. She was found eleven days later under a possible picture of amnesia, in a hotel under the name of a lover of her husband.

In 1930, she married archaeologist Max Mallowan. He inspired several of her later novels, many of which were adapted into theater and film with high acceptance.

In 1971, she was appointed Commander of the Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II.

She died of natural causes in 1976.
