4.1 Collaborative writing

“The back house”

In the Netherlands she hid
The story of this girl
From childhood very hurt
That in her diary she wrote.

In between its sheets
Memories with memory
Leaving in evidence
The whole trajectory of her.

Looking for the moments
So that no one would hear them
Her day passed
From overnight.

In the "back house" she was hiding
Where their stories happened
Write between its lines
To leave in memory.

Someday that war would end
They would no longer be hidden

Someday they would return
To be a person, to be Jews.

This hidden girl
It would be neither more nor less
That the great ones recognized
For her texts and writings.

Anne frank.

The rule of thirds is a composition guide that places your subject in the left or right third of an image, leaving the other two-thirds clearer. While there are other forms of composition, the rule of thirds generally leads you to take attractive, well-composed photos.
